

Death of a loved one produces grief beyond measure - a hurt so deep that it appears incurable and inescapable. Within you, me and every man lies no capability to manage the painful process of grief thus making any such attempt foolish. Wherein then does mans hope in such despair lay? In Grief Beyond Measure, But Not Beyond Grace Frank Shivers gives answer. Grief indeed is beyond measure to heal yourself but not beyond Gods grace to relieve granting peace and hope. There is no hell on earth so deep but that Gods grace can go deeper still and no sorrow of heart so deep but that Gods grace can go deeper still.
